

Who Was Who II of Hanover, IL

as of April 7, 2011

This proposed book contains biographies of people from Hanover who died after March 2, 1980, and up until when the book will go to the printer, hopefully in February 2011. The first Who Was Who was a book of biographies of everyone from Hanover, who had died, from the first settlers, up until February 28, 1980, when the book went to the printer.

PLEASE let me know ALL middle names of everyone in each bio. This will help people doing research years from now.

As you read through the information below PLEASE let me know of any omissions or corrections of any of your friends or family. I want this to be a book that will honor all of our past Hanover residents and to keep them alive in our memory.

The prerequisites for being listed in this book are (1) being deceased, (2) having some sort of connection to Hanover, whether that is being born in Hanover or living in Hanover for some time, or (3) being buried in one of the three cemeteries.

THANKS,

Terry Miller

NOTE: For several of the bio's the last name of some of the daughters are not currently correct, because of divorce. For genealogy research purposes it is strongly advised by historians to keep the last name correct for the time the obit was written.

NOTE: You will notice some of the bio's are in italic. These are Hanover people that should have been placed in the first Who Was Who, but at that time I had not located any information on them. Most of these folks are HanoverHigh School Alumni.

Miller, Lois Martha (Giro) This book is dedicated to my mother Lois Miller. The nucleus of this book is from the scrapbooks that my Mother kept all of her life. Lois was born June 30, 1928 in rural Hanover and was the daughter of Vincent Joseph and Margaret Ann (Haas) Giro. She attended the Black School, Lost Mound School, and Hanover School. In 1943 Lois lied about her age so she could help with the war effort and began working at the Savanna Ordnance Depot at the age of 15. At home at night, after work, Lois would write hundreds of short notes each week and take them to work and place one of the "words of encouragement notes" into each box of ammo she packed, to help brighten the day of the soldier that would open the box on the war front. After the war ended Lois began working as a waitress at the Villa Café in Hanover where she met her future husband, Floyd Charles Miller. They were married on May 25, 1946 in Hanover and two sons were born to this union: Jerald "Jerry" Lee Miller and Terry James Miller. After her sons were both in school for a several years she began working at Mitchell's Ben Franklin store in 1959 and remained there until 1977. Lois was a member of the Hanover VFW Ladies Auxiliary for over 60 years and for many of those years she served as the secretary. In the mid-1960s, when the Vietnam War began, Lois started sending birthday cards to every Hanover soldier in the military on behalf of the ladies auxiliary and also one from her. This project escalated from just birthday cards, and before long she was committed to writing four or five letters each week and sending them to one of the soldiers stationed overseas. Lois remained doing her letter writing campaign until the Vietnam War was declared over in 1975. Lois was a charter member of the Hanover Days committee when it was first organized in 1972, and also an active member of the Hanover Women's Club.

Lois died August 12, 2009 in her home and she is buried in Evergreen Cemetery. On the day of her funeral, August 17, 2009, it was decided by her sons to establish a small piece of triangular land, across the street from the Hanover Veteran's Memorial, to be known as Mothers' Park. This park is meant to honor "Our Mother, Your Mother, and All the Mothers in the World." To the best of our research, no other park in the world is named to honor Mothers'.
